

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A plasma having a certain density is generated between a test electrode and an electrode on a display substrate comprising a TFT array which is a circuit
5 under test, and a test signal is transmitted between the electrode and the test electrode via the plasma. With this technique, a probe means and a testing apparatus enabling measurement of the electrical characteristics of the TFT array formed on the display substrate in a non-contact manner can be provided.